The only great curative agent upon general principles of a compound oil ever sold in the United states or in the world. There are many preparations offered caried (91s, which are not 191s, but only cheap Etheral compounds. The Macedonian compound is an Oil, and has demonstrated itself to be the greatest wonder of the 19th century. No one hundred remedies combined have one-half the curative properties possessed by the Macedonian, even though advertised for the same purpose.

A CERTAIN CURE!

DROPPING LEAVES.

The leaves are dropping dropping And I watch them as they go; Now whirling, floating, stopping. With a look of noiseless wor. With a look of noiseless wee.
Yes, I watch them in their falling,
As they tremble from the stem,
With a stiffness so appalling—
And my heart goes down with them!

Yes, I see them floating round me Mid the besting of the rain, Like the hopes that still have bound me To the fading past again.
They are floating through the stillness,
They are given to the storm— And they tremble off like phantoms

Of a Joy that has no form But the proud tree stands up prouder, While its branches cast their leaves— And the cold wind whispers londer, Like a sobbing breath that grieves; A heart that's long in breaking As a single flower may cling, All withered, shorn, and quaking, On the naked stalk till spring.

Then I thought-" That tree is human, And its boughs are human too; For while the leaves were wealthy With kindling sap and dew-With the sun shot golden lances Through all its billowy green, And the birds poured love and music Where the slanting rays had been-

Then its great roots gathered fragrance Like wine-drops from the ground Till it sparkled through the foliage As faith fills the profound Of souls that live together In kindred trust and love, Till their union seems immortal As the burning stars above.

Had left their own decay; And Change, a ruthless vampire That steals the soul away, ame with the mellow autumn, And touched those leaves with blight; Then the forest came stealing earthwar Like a ghost upon the night.

When the golden leaves were sear, And the brown crept dinly on them In the old age of the year,-Ah! the roots withdrew their nurture While the tree stood firm and high; When the leaves had lost their greense Lo, it east them off to die! Then I thought, "Those leaves were wear, And thrilled with human pain,

As they fell so cold and dreary Beneath the beating rain. While the boughs waved slow and grimly Like shadows on the day !

As they quivered from my sight, And it followed faster, faster, As my hopes had taken flight. So I watched the pale leaves flutter. Is enough for me and them.
